The Home and School Association met November 13 with a good attendance, considering so many country folks were threshing and others busy with mumps.

Mrs. Larson reported hot lunch had been served two days on trial and seemed much enjoyed by the pupils and not too heavy a burden to the mothers and high school girls who did the work.

Mr. Reeds read an invitation from Wainwright Home and School to attend a conference. Mr. Inglis was asked to appoint some members to attend.

Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Simmerman and Mrs. Milne were made a committee to enquire about use of auditorium in evenings.

School films were shown that the parents might see the pictures used for Audio Visual Aid.

January meeting will be second Monday in January at the School at 8 p.m. Watch for date of Dec. meeting.

Jarrow News

Mrs. W. Lockhart visited a few days at the Alf Larson home last week.

A group of young people returning from a dance in Kinsella last Friday morning narrowly escaped injury when the car in which they were riding struck a horse on the highway near the Jarrow elevators. The car received considerable damage and the horse died from the result of injuries sustained.

Joe Oracheski has gone to the city to work for the Luna Gas Co.

Miss Mabel Lockhart spending a few days with her sister Mrs. Gordon Elliott at Irma.

Something for Jarrow to look forward to is the possibility of the Calgary Power coming through town.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Stauffer were visitors in the city over the week end. Mr. Stauffer came on home but Mrs. Stauffer and children stopped over for a visit at Tofield.

Little Linda McClure is a patient in the Wainwright hospital with an ear infection.

Thieves were again busy in the Jarrow district when they stole Joe Peterson's car right out of his barn. The police were notified and are hot on the trail of the culprits.

Congratulations go to G. Lovig who is sporting a new Chevy truck and to Runjons who have a 1949 Ford.

Xmas Mail

Again Post Offices in Canada will remain closed on Christmas and New Year's Day. In view of this and the enormous volume of mail during the Christmas season, it is imperative that patrons expecting timely delivery of letters, cards and parcels should post well ahead of mailing 'deadlines.' A late card or gift looks like an after-thought.

You can save time and avoid standing in line by buying your stamps now. Carry a 25c or $1.00 stamp (3c, 4c and 7c Airmail with stickers) of stamps in your purse or wallet in case you run short.

During the rush your mail will be despatched sooner if you separate and tie First Class Christmas cards and letters in one bundle; and Christmas cards having no correspondence enclosed in unsealed envelopes prepaid at one cent, in another. Use correct postage—no one likes receiving insufficiently prepaid mail.

For prompt despatch of urgent mail post well in advance of the regular closing times: Eastbound 10:15 a.m., westbound 4 p.m.

Use extra care when sending Christmas parcels. PACK in strong container, using shock-absorbing material for fragile articles; WRAP outside with heavy paper; ADDRESS clearly, completely, including your return address in upper left corner; TIE securely with strong cord, knotting each cross-over. (Spoils of cord can be purchased at any hardware store.) Protect documents, photographs, etc., with stiffening boards, heavy paper and cord.

Each year thousands of articles mailed in Canada end up at the Dead Letter Office, undeliverable, through carelessness preparation for mailing.

Bee-Keeping In The West

BEE-KEEPING IS A LUCRATIVE INDUSTRY in many parts of Canada. During the war, when sugar was scarce, the demand for honey increased considerably and it was estimated that there were nearly half a million bee colonies in operation in Canada. This increased production has been maintained since the war and from twenty to thirty-five million pounds of honey are produced each year. Conditions on the Prairies appear to be favourable to this industry and the number of Western farmers who keep bees has increased steadily in the past twenty-five years. Alberta is a leader among all the provinces in the production of honey, this being in part due to the fact that the long days and abundance of sunshine in the northern Peace River region contribute to a large crop there each year.

Bees Require Warm Weather

In 1946, of the 23,975,000 pounds of honey produced in Canada, 6,192,000 came from Alberta, while Ontario followed with 5,685,000 pounds, Manitoba and Saskatchewan were next with 4,810,000 pounds and 3,663,000 pounds respectively. In the season just past, the total honey crop in Canada amounted to 39,717,000 pounds, which was some 4,000,000 pounds less than in the previous year. The drop in production this year was attributed to the poor season in Eastern Canada, where an unusual number of cool days in July and August reduced the amount of honey produced there. Of the 500,900 bee colonies in Canada last year, 137,000 were in the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia.

New Colonies Each Season

The winters in most parts of Western Canada are unsuitable for the keeping of bees and so in that part of the country most bee-keepers plan to start new colonies each season. Hazards of the long cold winter and other climatic conditions at one time made it seem impractical to keep bees in the West, but it has been shown that the long, warm days of the Prairie summer are very favourable to honey production. Bee-keeping is one example of the success of mixed farming in the West, and the progress which has been made in this industry is a credit to those farmers and agricultural scientists who pioneered in introducing it there.

To Help Mothers Without Support

VANCOUVER.—Soon there will be an organization for unsupported mothers in Vancouver.

An association is being organized by Mrs. Robert Symington, clerk in the police department's records office, and now has a membership of 15.

Mothers who are without a husband's support and unmarried mothers will be admitted to membership.

The association, said Mrs. Symington, is "for the improvement of existing conditions of unsupported mothers everywhere."

It will be for those who wish to maintain a happy single home, develop their children in some self-chosen field of work.

There will be a course of lectures on all phases of becoming a better mother and a better companion to the child.

ALBERTA, N.W.T.—It was 16 degrees below zero at this farthest north Canadian weather station, 400 miles south of the North Pole.

The cold made some of the district's hardy animal friends a trifle tame, the station staff added by J. R. Lewis. One fed sausages to a white Arctic fox that snapped up the meat and came back for more.

"What's the matter with her?" asked the captain.

"She says she didn't kiss her goodby."

"Well," snorted the captain, "I'm only going to be gone for two years!"

Intuition Saves Worker's Life

Friday, Oct. 13, proved to be a lucky day for Henry Walters, of Regina, who saved himself from dropping 70 feet to the ground off the Western Grain elevator at Birsay, Sask., that morning.

Walters, who has been with the shingling crew for many years, has no fear of dizzy heights. But the night before, he awakened slightly ill. The next morning he told the foreman that he was not well and did not get up to the top of the elevator that day. However, after breakfast, he appeared, so well that no one objected to his going on with the job. But when he got to the top of the elevator and eased himself down the short ladder to the shingling platform, intuition told him to take precautions. So he wrapped a length of heavy rope around his midriff and tied it to the guy ropes of the platform.

In less than an hour he began to feel dizzy. "I guess I'll have to pull myself up," he said to his partner. "I think I'm going to faint!" Before help could get to him, he had fainted away and was slumped over the edge of the platform, 70 feet in the air, with only the rope around him between him and a plunge to death.

The foreman and the other shingler had gotten out the shingles. Walters hauled up the shingling tools and down the top window. They took him down on the elevator lift and he gained consciousness at the bottom. But Walters was not so shaken as his two friends. He rested, had dinner, rested again, and a few hours later was back on top of the elevator.

Top load of 25 cows in the offering brought $30 per 100 pounds and 150 head of cows and heifers brought between $28 and $30 per 100 pounds. Representatives of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor bought 50 head of bred stock cows at the sale.

The sale of Bar U stock and heifers totalled around $78,000.

Alberta Wheat Gets High Grade

LETHBRIDGE.—W. M. Wagler, field man for the Alberta wheat pool here, said he believes most of the estimated 12,000,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern wheat grown in Canada this year was produced in southern Alberta.

The 12,000,000-bushel estimate was made by the board of grain commissioners at Winnipeg.

"But, Mr. Wagler said, southern Alberta may have produced more than the board's estimated amount.

Our company has bought a lot of No. 1 wheat this year and there was a lot of it grown," he said. He estimated that between 10,000,000 and 13,000,000 bushels of No. 1 wheat were grown in the area from the American border north to the Aldersley line. Aldersley is about 30 miles south of Calgary.

Ban Lifted On Importation Of Dressed Poultry And Eggs

OTTAWA.—The Agriculture department announced immediate lifting of the ban against importation of eggs, poultry carcasses or parts of carcasses.

The ban will continue to apply against importation of live poultry.

The ban against importation of poultry eggs and parts of carcasses was imposed last July following a serious outbreak of Newcastle disease among poultry flocks in British Columbia. Many flocks were destroyed in an effort to halt the spread of the disease.

Since then, the situation has improved sufficiently to permit imports of poultry eggs and carcasses. It is not known when the ban will be lifted against the imports of live poultry.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

TURNABOUT

By HAROLD HELFER

"He Watched Her Coiled Finger Tighten Against The Trigger".

STEVE LAKEMAN loudly gave the touch his share of their joint holdings for seven years. And he hoped that, after being adjudged an insane murderer, he would be entitled to everything when he got out again.

One thing plagued his curiosity, Grace herself. When he had called her from the depot, she had said, "It will be wonderful to see you again, Steve, darling! Please hurry!" Her letters to him had been sweet and loving. But Steve had thought that she was picking up to him to induce him to sign over their holdings when he got out again.

Maybe she really cared for him after all. Maybe she had tired of the other guy and found out that it was Steve she wanted. That would certainly add irony to the situation. He smiled to himself. He wondered if he ought to play the gallant lover before killing her.

They hadn't been so bad, those three years in the mental hospital. The first part had been fairly rugged when he was pretending to be a victim of the ravages of ravings. And the last part, when he was "recovering", had really been something like a vacation, with occupational therapy and recreational.

And any feeling of boredom or monotony always was mitigated by the thought that someday, without subsequent peril to himself, he would have his wife by the throat—something which would make him $70,000 richer when they'd put him home. So he'd spend another year or two there "recovering" and then he'd be free and rich.

Another husband, discovering infidelities, would have been inclined to wring her neck then and there. But he'd pushed his rage into the background—and began to plan.

He'd disappeared for a week, dressed up and with a wild look. He'd walked up to a policeman. He didn't know who he was but he wanted to be locked up because he felt impulses toward violence. It was a good performance.

He lit another cigarette. In a few minutes now, the cab would be in front of the house. He felt excitement rising within him, but there was no panic or worry. He had lived with his plan for a long time. The anticipation alone induced him to the satisfied feeling of something well done. There wasn't a flaw or a chance of backfire anywhere. He knew that, when he was committed to the asylum, legally Grace couldn't

Unconcerned About War, Taxes

Around Heppenheim, Germany, they call him "Adolf, the Cave Man". His name is Adolf Ellerbroek, a graduate of Hamburg university's school of architecture. With the rise of Adolf Hitler and his Nazi party, Ellerbroek decided that the world was "too depraved" and moved to Heppenheim, where he dug him out two caves for a home and married in. After two years he and wife have a 13-year-old daughter. They live on vegetables, roots and mushrooms and none of the trio has ever had any need for the services of a doctor. He says that if everyone was like him there would be no one no king. No one but Adolf during the last war. To him it was an important's a soldier's duty. Here he grinds an axe on a home-assembled grindstone in front of his cave.
